

Richland Youth Sports Family Work Agreement

Richland Youth Sports depends a great deal on the support of all parents/families to run the program. Worker requirements are divided out by families and not by number of athletes. What this means is that a family with four athletes has the same worker requirements as a family with one athlete. Those families that are members of Richland Youth Sports agree to commit to working hours during the Richland Blizzard Bash Tournament (typically held during the first 2 weeks of February), and possibly during regular season, non tournament games. Failure to meet the minimum family work requirements will result in forfeiture of the $100 worker fee paid at registration. Sign-up for work sessions will be on a first come, first serve basis and will be available once the regular game and tournament schedules are established.

Below are the worker requirements for the season.

- Each family is responsible for working approximately eight (8) hours during the Richland Blizzard Bash tournament. The number of required hours may decrease depending on how many athletes register with Richland Youth Sports, and on how many games will be played during the RYS Blizzard Bash Tournament.
- If necessary, one (1) of the required family work hours may be moved from the RYS Blizzard Bash tournament and used instead for regular season games in order to assist with jobs such as concession stand work or scoreboard operator. At this time, all work hours will be for tournament work only, but RYS reserves the right to re-allocate the worker requirement hours to the regular season if it becomes necessary.

Exemption: Exemptions may be available to families that commit their time throughout the season in other capacities. Please speak with an RYS board member to learn more.

I, _____ (parent/guardian's name), understand that if the above family work requirements are not met during the RYS season, the $100 worker fee will not be refunded upon the conclusion of the season.
